

How are the characters feeling?

Today, we are going to be exploring the character's emotions (feelings) throughout the film and how their emotions change at different points in the film.

1. First, watch the film again on our class page to remind yourself of what happens, think carefully about how the characters are feeling and how that changes while you are watching.
2. We are going to plot the character's emotions on a graph to show how they are feeling at different points.

How are the characters feeling?

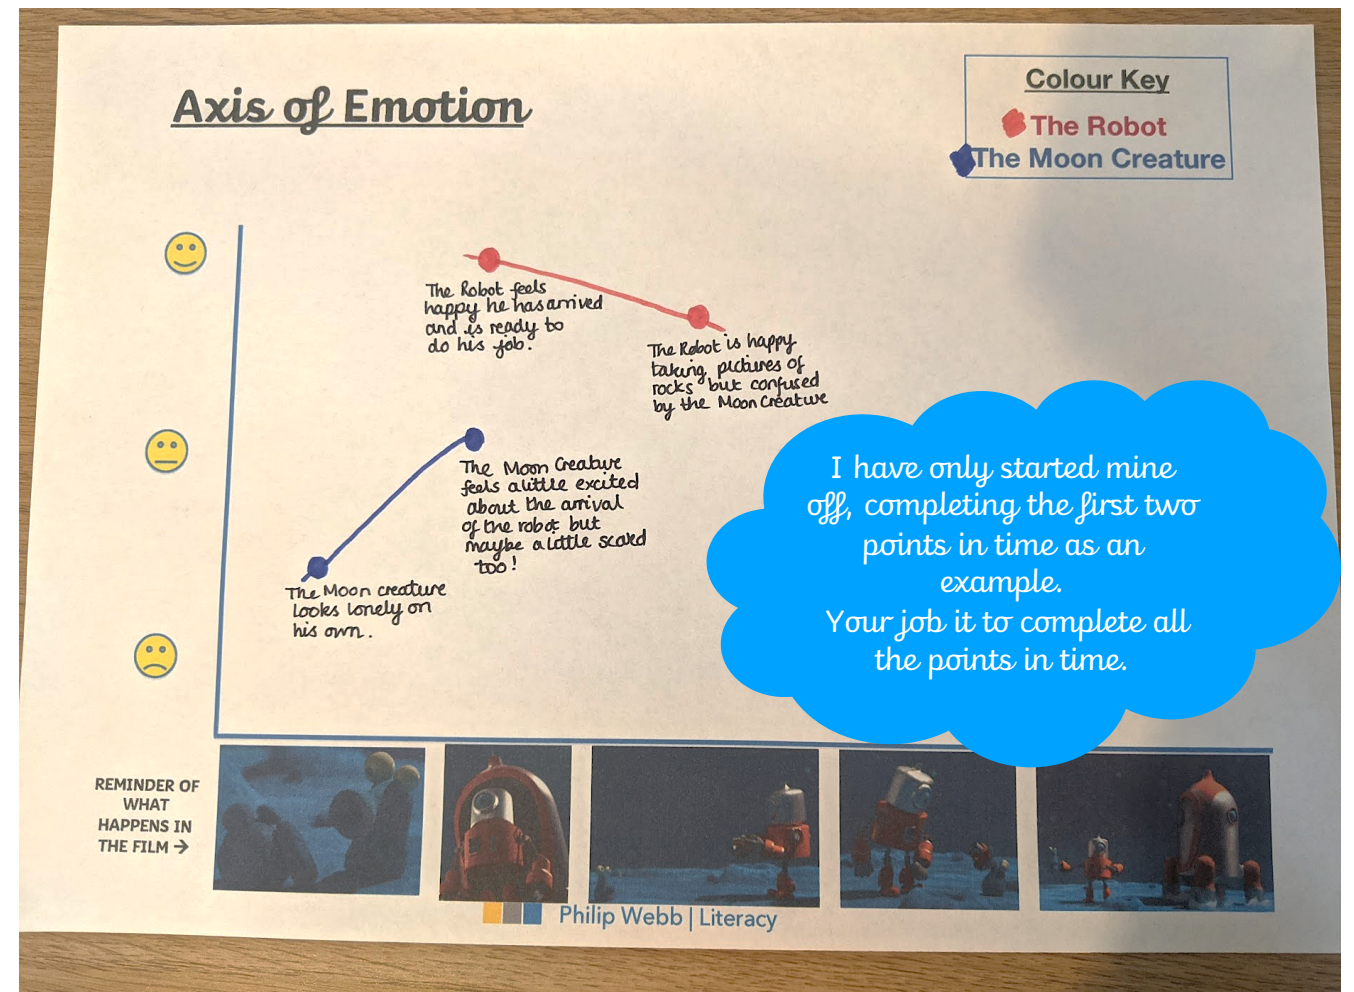

Here is an example of what your work might look like.

I have used a different colour for each of the characters.

I have decided which face on the scale suits their emotion at that point and I have explained why I think that.

You can either play and pause the film clip while you plot each character, or you can use the strip of pictures at the bottom to help remind you.

Either print out the worksheet or draw your own graph in your home learning books.

Just for Fun Creative Challenge: Design and make your own robot explorer

Use scrap materials to make a collage of the explorer robot or use your imagination to design your own character or rocket.

The collage on the right is an example using The Lost Thing by Shaun Tan.
